"Are we going to be had?" demanded Merritt, testily, "are we going to stand for this holdup?" and he turned dismally toward the door.

"Don't you think we'd better keep Mr. Slade busy in some other way," Strickland repeated.

"I don't," Merritt flung back over his shoulder as he left the room, following, as usual, by Hunt.

Merritt's hasty departure was the signal for Katherine to adjust her wraps and remark: "We must be late for Tristan."

Hayes followed her. "I must see you alone, Katherine. You're still free—there's no foreigner on the scene, is there, Katherine?"

"Bob," Katherine's voice was sweet but firm. "I don't think I shall ever marry now—"

"Oh, nonsense," he protested.

"No," even more positively. "The more I see of men—but what's the use? There never was but one man I could have got on with, and I didn't happen to live in his time."

"Who was the boy?" Hayes asked, lightly.

"Strange," Katherine replied, penitently. "I've just been talking about him—Napoleon Bonaparte."

"Oh, Lord—that fellow," Hayes was much relieved. "Can I have tomorrow evening?"

"Yes—if you—yes—tomorrow evening, Bob."

Her voice lingered a bit on the Bob, and with quick impulsiveness Hayes caught her hand and kissed it.

In another minute she had turned to Slade.

"Oh, Mr. Slade, won't you let me make a head of you?"

"A head of me?" Slade repeated in surprise.

"Think it over," Katherine suggested, as she and her father went out, leaving Hayes and Slade watching her proud, graceful figure until it disappeared from view.

Slade looked critically at Hayes for a moment or two after the girl had gone.

"Oh, now I remember," he suddenly exclaimed. "You're the chap she gave up for Paris a long time ago?"

"When she was twenty-one and I was twenty-four and six feet one inch of a western lawyer, just out of the woods. How does Mrs. Slade take to this governorship business?" he finished, abruptly.

"She doesn't take to it," Slade's voice was hard.

"I was afraid she wouldn't." "Well, nobody's going to stand in my way." A malignant light showed in his eyes.

"My boy, I'm out to win."

In spite of the fact that he was in full evening attire, he thrust his hands into his pockets and almost strutted about the room. "I outgeneraled that crowd here tonight. By God, I did! Do you know?" He paused in his walk and looked down on Hayes' six feet sprawled over one of the brocaded chairs—"there's just little drop of that fellow—Napoleon Bonaparte—in me!"

Napoleon Bonaparte got on by leaving a woman behind," Hayes returned, seriously, refusing to enter into Slade's spirit of self-satisfied good humor.

"You mind your own d—n business, Bob," Slade turned on him, suddenly.

"All right—I'm off to the opera. I only meant that Napoleon was a bad boy for you to follow, because he treated his first wife like a dirty dishrag. That's why I'm glad that second little Austrian hussy paid him back. That's all. I love Mrs. Slade. When I was sick with fever in your mining camp she was a mother to me."

"Don't forget that I made you," Slade reminded him. "I," and he tapped his chest. "I gave you your chance."

"I don't. All the same I'd hate to see you elected, because of Mrs. Slade. It seems to be the regular thing, becoming universal, for a very successful man to leave home the minute he's on his feet. Good night."

"One minute, Bob. You've given me a lot of good advice. I'll give you some. Are you in love with that girl?"

"Yes," Hayes grunted; "good night. Is that all?"

"No," Slade paused, watching Hayes through narrowed eyelids. "That girl needs a large pile with every one of her fingers in it. Bob, I'm sorry for you. Your pie isn't big enough."

"Well—it's my pie. Good night—and he was gone.

After Hayes had gone, Slade sat his arms resting on the table, staring into space. Every now and then the corners of his mouth came down and his eyes narrowed. He was thinking of Katherine Strickland and Hayes. What woman for Hayes! Hayes must be a presumptuous pup to ever think of winning that queen. Such women were meant for the kings of the earth—not for their hirelings.

Suddenly Slade's eyes lighted with the fire of decision. His mouth became a firm, straight line of determination. There was something implacable and grim in his very attitude as the resolve to win Katherine Strickland became fixed in his mind. He longed to hurry after her—to tell her of his decision to fight, if not with, then for her. He was eager to show her just how much they two together could make out of life, a big, fine fight for position and power.

Even the thought of being governor was left in the distance as plan after plan raced through his mind, of greater conquests and bigger achievements, possibly only with a woman like Katherine Strickland for his wife. So absorbed and intense were his thoughts of the future with her for the moment he forgot completely the woman who for 30 years had kept her place as his wife. In all his dealings he had never considered obstacles, except to sweep them from his path. As he remembered the present and Mary, he never hesitated or faltered from his newly made resolution.

Mary could go it alone. He would see that she had everything that money could buy. He would make her comfortable and take care of her. That she should be further considered never entered his mind. Always ruthless in his methods, he was equally cruel even when the obstacle to his advancement was a fragile little woman who had given him the best of her love and years and who would gladly have laid down her life to save his.

It was not as if a sudden flame of intensive, overwhelming love for Katherine Strickland had surged through his heart. It was nothing so decent or as fine or as blameless as that. His whole attitude toward the girl was one of cold-blooded acquisition. He had determined to have her just as he had determined only last week to outrace every other man at the rug auction. He wanted her to take a place in his life because he knew what her value would be to him. He wanted her beauty, her brain, her saucy faire, as so many stepping stones by which to mount higher and higher in the affairs of the state and the nation.

In spite of the fact that he criticized his wife's lack of social graces, he was wise enough to know that he was far from a finished product himself. In spite of himself, traces of the parvenu occasionally showed through the veneer of bluff and arrogance. With a wife like Katherine he would soon come to know all the fine points of the social game. A wife like Katherine would cover up a multitude of his little sins of commission and omission.

CHAPTER IV.

Slade wanted Katherine Strickland for his wife much the same as he would have desired a wealthy, clever, influential man for a partner. It was to be a union of ambition. There was no tenderness in his thoughts of her. He was actuated purely and simply by the lust for power and the greed of glory. All the softer, better things in the man's nature were swamped by this torrent of craving for worldly success that was sweeping him on to commit the most dastardly act in his long career of trampling over the heads and hearts of adversaries and opponents.

Even when he was a boy Dan Slade had always set his teeth at "You can't do it," or "It can't be done." The very difficulty of a thing strengthened his determination to do. All his life long his success had been punctuated by the rule of other men. He had not advanced so far without pushing other men back. Now that a woman instead of a man stood in the way, the result was the same. His methods might be quieter, more merciful, but the answer would be the same. Mary's sterling worth, her long years of devotion and sweet tenderness counted for nothing once he became convinced that Mary's dowdiness, her standpat policy and her arrested development were stop-gaps in his own opportunity for progression. He ignored the fact that the little brown-eyed, patient woman was as much a part of him as were his eyes or his arms or any other very essential part of his being.

It was at just this point in Slade's pitiless reasoning that Mary, peering over the baluster and seeing him alone, hurried down the stairs.

"Thank goodness, she's gone," she declared as she came into the room. Then seeing the numerous side lights burning she hastened to turn one after the other down to a glimmer. "I'm so glad you're not going out," she went on, coming over to him and rubbing her cheek against his sleeve. The little movement was a pathetically mute appeal for some caress. "What'd they say?" she asked, suddenly, as she realized that her tender yearning met with no response.

But her husband was in no communicative frame of mind.

"You're not mad with me, are you?" she questioned, wistfully, very much

"Go Ahead With Your Paper, I'll Take My Chances."

Like an eager child who has been repressed.

"No," Slade replied, briefly and without much interest.

Mary breathed a quick sigh of relief. "Ah, then, we'll have a nice, quiet, pleasant evening," she declared, adding coaxingly: "Let's go upstairs and have a game of euchre. We haven't played for ever so long."

Slade looked at her, his eyes drawn into a deep frown. It was true he wasn't angry with her, but he was angry at the thwarting circumstances that were hemming him in. Her very manner irritated him now—her quiet contentment, her calm acceptance of her failure to meet his guests and fill her place as mistress of his home maddened him. He was all the more determined to fight for something else—to begin his campaign for a governorship and another woman that moment.

Progressing Nicely.

The various committees appointed by Floating Canoe Tribe, No. 76, I. O. R., to make all preliminary arrangements for the numerous tribes throughout the State which will congregate here during the next fortnight, have been untiring in their efforts, and there is every indication the coming meet will eclipse any previous gathering of Red Men held in the domain of Kentucky. Elaborate preparations are being made for the entertainment of visiting tribesmen, and judging things from the present outlook, it will prove one of the most notable fraternal gatherings ever held within the gates of our city.

On Sunday, May 10, the local tribe will hold memorial services and pay loving and graceful tribute to their departed tribesmen—their dead. There will be several splendid orators present on this occasion, and the ceremonies will be solemn, beautiful and impressive. Hon. Beckham Overstreet, of Louisville, the gifted young Kentucky orator, will be the principal speaker on this occasion.

He has thrilled and charmed thousands by his matchless oratory, and the public is invited to hear him.

Monday, the 11th, members of the "Haymakers," a side issue of the Order, will engage in a grand powwow and war dance and make things both lively and interesting for all comers and goers. There will not be a dull moment during the entire day. As everybody knows, the "Haymakers" are a lively bunch and not belong to that dull class of individuals. You must be up and doing when the "Haymakers" are on the war path, or you are liable to lose your scalp. No doubt, several pale faces will be brained.

Tuesday morning, the 12th, the Great Council, composed of big chiefs and great warriors—representatives from every tribe in the State—will be here and go into executive session. New rules and regulations will possibly be adopted at this session for the government of the numerous tribesmen who abound throughout the Kentucky hunting grounds. This, no doubt, will be a most interesting meeting. A large number of delegates are expected to respond to roll call, as there are hundreds of tribes in the Kentucky reservation.

The Great Council sessions will take up all of Tuesday and Wednesday. Some of the Big Chiefs and High Dignitaries, who directed the destinies of the Kentucky Red Men, will surrender their robes and high offices to other notable warriors and braves, who will endeavor to carry out the great work formulated by their worthy predecessors.

RED HOUSE.

A party of 140 Eastern Normal students and teachers enjoyed a picnic here Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Coniff are being congratulated over the arrival of a fine baby boy, born Saturday night.

Mrs. Walden is the only one reported ill in this neighborhood.

Mr. H. P. Dykes was in Winchester Monday on business.

Mr. Conway Dozier, of Clark county, was here on business this week.

KIRKSVILLE.

Mr. Chas. Brandenburg, salesman for the I. F. Sadler & Co., Stock Yards, at Cincinnati, spent the past week with his father, Mr. Jack Brandenburg.

Mrs. Nancy Long and mother, of Lancaster, have returned home after a pleasant stay of a few days with Mrs. Rufus Blakeman.

The burial of Mrs. Mary Ann Lear, of Esopus, occurred Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Coy graveyard.

Mrs. Lear, who was one of the oldest residents of the Kirksville neighborhood, was born March 8, 1833, and was married to Clabourne Lear March 8, 1849.

Her family there are 139 direct descendants; 12 children, 58 grandchildren and 69 great-grandchildren. Of the 139 descendants, 117 are living and about 60 were present at the burial. Mrs. Lear was a member of the Christian church and a good and estimable woman, who has gone to her reward.

Mr. and Mrs. Boyd Dalton, of Union, spent Sunday and Monday with Mrs. Mary E. and Miss Myrtle Dalton.

A number of our citizens attended court at Lancaster Monday. Lancaster always draws a crowd from here on court days and a good many stock traders.

Services were held at the Presbyterian church Sunday by the regular pastor, Rev. Eldredge, of Paint Lick, with a large congregation in attendance.

Berea.

Mr. J. L. Ambrose has been quite ill, but is now better.

There has been quite a number of cases of measles in this community, but none have proved serious.

Mr. and Mrs. Rollins Tudor spent Saturday night and Sunday with Mrs. Tudor's parents, here.

Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Marcus, Mrs. G. W. Young and daughter, and Mrs. May Lair returned Sunday from Paint Lick, where they had been visiting relatives for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Carrier spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Ben Boen.

It is reported that there are several cases of smallpox in a colored family near here.

Farmers are very busy through this section of the county getting their ground in readiness for corn planting.

Mr. James Gilmore spent Sunday afternoon at Berea Hospital with his nephew, Walter Blevins, who is improving fast and will soon be able to be out.

Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Tevis were in Richmond Monday shopping, and also called on their daughter, Miss Eva, who is a student at the Normal.

Mr. Wallace Lutes and family were called to Mr. Mason Anglin's Sunday on account of the serious illness of some of the family of piomazine poisoning from eating blackberry jam.

Quite a number of students and citizens are planning to attend the K. E. A. in Louisville on Friday and Saturday of this week.

Mr. Geo. B. Golden is very ill at this writing.

Mr. W. N. Hughes and wife spent last Sunday with Mr. John Anderson and wife in the country.

The whole community was shocked

Monday morning when it became known that Mr. Silas Mitchell was dead. He went to bed in his usual health about 10 o'clock Sunday night with the intention of leaving on the midnight train, but when the time came to awaken him, he had fallen asleep never to waken again.

Heart failure is supposed to have been the cause of his death. He leaves a father, two sisters, a brother and a host of friends to mourn his death. His body was laid to rest in Richmond Cemetery by the side of his mother, who has been dead a number of years.

PAINT LICK.

Dr. B. Ramsey and wife are with his son, B. Ramsey, for the summer.

Mrs. Mamie Holloway, of Chattanooga, is visiting friends here.

Prof. R. A. London, principal of our graded school, will attend the K. E. A. at Louisville.

EASTER

AND THE

Cold, disagreeable weather has caused a great many people to "hold off" buying their Spring wearing apparel, we have decided to make deep cuts in several departments in our Big Store.

ALTHOUGH our Spring business so far has been above the average, we still find that we have a much larger stock on hand than is justifiable at this time of the year. Having bought very largely in many of the biggest departments, and to move the stock quick and fast we have decided to reduce prices and clean up :

NOUR Clothing Department you will find everything up-to-date--Men's Boys', Youths' and Children's Clothing--all brand new stuff, bought for this Spring's business, and to move them quick and fast, we have made big reductions in price. See them before buying your Spring Suit.

DUR entire stock of Shoes are up-to-date. Men's, Women's, Youths' and Children's will be sold at a cut price to reduce stock. We carry the Queen Quality fine shoes for ladies, and William Kneeland's fine shoes for men, and many of the very best brands of Boys' and Children's shoes. They will all be sold at a reduction. Get our prices and save money.

WHY PAY MORE

Then you can buy the most up-to-date and genuine Hand-Tailored Suits, Coats, Skirts and Dresses for Ladies' and Misses' from us at a reduction of 4 to 1-3 off. You know we show the largest and best line of Ladies' ready-to-wear Apparel in Richmond; and now when we are slaughtering prices in this department, don't fail to take advantage of it. Buy your Spring suit, Coat or Dress now and save money.

WE HAVE the prettiest line of Wash Goods, Laces and Embroideries ever shown in Richmond. All are fresh and new. Come and see them. It is worth a trip to our Store even if you want to get posted about new styles. You are always welcome.

GET OUR low prices on Domestics, Bleached and Brown Cottons, Bed ticking, Ginghams, Percalines, etc. We will save you money

HAVE YOU seen our New Carpets, Rugs, Lace Curtains, Linoleums, Oil Cloths, etc. We are showing some exclusive patterns for Spring, and since we are making low prices in this department, you can't afford not to give us a look. See them and save money.

WE ARE making special prices on Home Dresses for ladies. We are showing a big line of them. Children's Wash Dresses in Ginghams, Percalines, White Goods, etc. All sizes and pretty styles. You can't afford to make them at the prices we are naming.

SEE OUR Children's Rompers and Boys' Wash Suits. The quality and style will please you. The prices will suit you.

The World's Population.

The population of the world has increased 140,000,000 in the past four years, and that means a demand for 140,000 more barrels of flour; besides meat or its substitutes, for the increased population. Therefore, there seems to be little prospect of a material reduction in the cost of living.

Farm Wages.

Although farm wages in the United States increased about 37 per cent. from 1900 to 1910, land values nearly doubled in the same time, indicating that in the distribution of the proceeds from farming operations, a larger proportion now goes to capital account and less to labor account than formerly. The interest rate on the return on the capitalized value of land, however, is probably less now than 25 or 30 years ago. The value per acre of crop production increased about 50 per cent. from 1900 to 1910.

$3,750 In a Dust Heap.

John Gulnac, 12 years old, and Everett Peabody, 10 years old, while digging about a rubbish pile at the Fellers factory one day last week, looking for bottles to sell to the junkman, found a roll of bills among a lot of papers which had been thrown out as waste. The roll contained $3,750. They took it to the factory superintendent, who identified it as the money lost a few days ago by Geo. Collins, who had drawn it from the bank to make a payment on a house he had purchased, had lost it and had been unable to get any trace of it.

Collins gave each of the boys $50 as a reward for their honesty.—Binghamton, N. Y., dispatch to N. Y. Herald.

Rats as Food.

Now that we have three Chinese restaurants in the West End, Londoners ought to be able to enjoy the pleasure of feeding off rats, which form a favorite dish in China. Split open, dried, pressed and powdered with a finely ground white bark, they look somewhat like haddock as they hang in long strings over butcher stalls.

Dr. Arthur Stradling, who shared Frank Buckland's cosmopolitan tastes in food, once declared that "rats would not only wholesome, but very nice if properly prepared. Admiral Beaufort, and other Arctic explorers speak highly of rats as a wholesome addition to their supply of food while in the far North"—London Chronicle.

Plant Bed Notes.

Plants are up in tobacco beds in a number of beds in Kentucky.

Tobacco canvas is seen all over Garfield county. A large acreage will be planted.

All over Bourbon county can be seen long white stretches of cotton, showing that hundreds of tobacco beds have been sown, and the tiny weeds under their protection will soon begin to give promise of rich returns.

Montgomery county growers will grow for quality more than quantity this year, notwithstanding they have really more acreage that they should attempt under any conditions.

In Clark and Madison counties white canvas may be seen dotted all over the countryside. A large acreage will be planted in both counties.

Fayette county, it is said, will put in her usual large acreage.

KILL THE CATARRH GERM---

USE HYOMEI.

It's the direct-to-the-spot method—you breathe it. Do not delay and continue to suffer from catarrh, head colds, bronchitis or sniffles. It is not only needless and annoys your friends, but dangerous to your general health.

Begin the Hyomei treatment at once. It is one of the easiest, quickest and surest ways to clear the head and quickly and permanently banish catarrh.

Hyomei being medicated air immediately reaches the sore and irritated membrane and tissues—it's antiseptic and germicidal healing begins at once.

You will surely like Hyomei—its relief is not only immediate but lasting. Money refunded by B. L. Middleton if you are not satisfied.

Get the complete outfit—$1.00 size. Druggists everywhere sell Hyomei.

The Baking Powder Question Solved

for all by Calumet.
For daily use in millions of kitchens has proved that Calumet is highest not only in quality but in leavening power as well—unfailingly results—pure to the extreme—and wonderfully economical in use. Ask your grocer. And try Calumet next baking day.

Received Highest Awards

You don't save money when you buy cheap or big-can baking powder. Don't buy Calumet. It's more expensive, more wholesome, gives best results. Calumet is far superior to sour milk and soda.

Which Kind Are You?

On the subject of debtors Homer Hoch has the following in the Marion (Kan.) Record:

"Some folks can't pay their debts when due, but regret it, and pay as soon as they can. Heaven prosper 'em. Some folks can pay their debts, but never do. Heaven be merciful to 'em. Some folks pay their debts cheerfully. Heaven bless 'em. Some folks pay their debts, but roar about it and abuse their creditors. Heaven pity 'em. Nothing shows folks up more than the attitude they take toward paying or trying to pay, their debts. A newspaper subscription past due is a debt, and one that should be, and generally is, paid cheerfully. How about yours, if in arrears? Look at the date following your name on the label of this paper (or its wrapper if it comes to you in a wrapper), and if in arrears, please call and settle or send remittance by mail."

I TOOK PE-RU-NA

Was Able to Sleep and Eat Again

Mrs. Mueller says: "I keep Peruna in the house constantly. When I am not feeling well I take a few doses. It always restores."

Mrs. Mueller's story of her experience with Peruna fully explains why she always keeps Peruna on hand. A few years ago she was very sick. The trouble seemed to be the stomach and liver. She suffered great pain. Was unable to get anything to help her. She was growing weaker and weaker. She became tired of life.

Somebody suggested that she write to the Peruna Co. She did so. Through their advice she began to use Peruna. In a letter from her at this time she says: "Through the use of Peruna I have regained my health. I took only a bottle and a half when I was able to sleep and eat again and my nervousness disappeared." No wonder Mrs. Mueller keeps Peruna in the house. Under similar circumstances Peruna would be in every house in the land.

Any one taking Peruna ought to have a free copy of the "Ils of Life." Address Peruna Co., Columbus, Ohio.

People who object to liquid medicines can now obtain Peruna Tablets. Far mers and others who live at a distance from a drug store should keep in the house a bottle of BALLARD'S SNOW LINIMENT. It may be needed at any time for cuts, wounds, sores, sprains or rheumatism. It is a powerful healing and penetrating remedy. Price 25c, 50c and $1.00 per bottle. Sold by Wines' Drug Sto.

to be one. That's just what I'm getting at. We ought to be of one mind." "Whose? Yours?" and Mary's sweet mouth puckered into a very little smile.

"I'm done," Slade decided, hopelessly.

"I can remember the time when you would have thought that was cunning," she reproached him.

"I'm going to my club, Mary," he announced, disregarding her playful attempt to smooth things over.

Mary gazed at him, bewildered by his swift changes of mood, hurt by his attitude, almost angry because he was so unreasonable.

Then love came rushing up into her heart. After all he was her Dan. What did this crossness or his nervousness

"I can't put it off any longer. I—er—" Slade stopped short. He was finding this attempt at an "understanding" much more difficult than he had anticipated.

"What is it you're trying to say, Dan?" Mary's voice was firmer than his. "What's in your mind? You keep hinting at something lately and you never finish it. What is it?"

"You're a rich woman in your own name, Mary. Are you satisfied with what I've settled on you?"

"Why, yes," came the quick response, as Mary's puzzled eyes searched his for a reason for the strange question. Then she added: "You've been mighty good to me, Dan."

"How would you like to go and live in the country, Mary?"

Glad surprise filled the woman's eyes. Her thin cheeks flushed as she clasped her hands excitedly.

"Oh, Dan, you know I'd like it. You're awfully good, father. I knew you'd back down and give in. This is no place for us."

"You leave me out of the question." And to his credit the man became shamefaced.

"I can't leave you out of the question," she protested quickly, not an inkling of her husband's real meaning having entered her head. In her perfect love and loyalty she was impervious to any hint of neglect or disloyalty from him. Had she known his thoughts her first care would have been to soothe him as one whose brain, overtaxed with affairs beyond her understanding, had suddenly clouded.

For an instant the man was silent. His face was turned from hers and he was looking out the doorway through which the stately figure of Katherine Strickland had just passed and through which he hoped to walk some day—governor.

"I—I—wouldn't go with you, Mary." He finally turned and looked her squarely in the eyes.

"Why—where would you be? Where would you live? Where would you?" She stopped and then finished. "Pshaw. That's all foolishness, Dan."

"Mary," Slade was firmer now. His voice had a ring of finality, but Mary didn't understand. "I can't go on apologizing for you eternally! You can't have a headache every night! I must either have a wife who can be the head of my household or none."

Into the woman's heart there leaped a sharp fear, followed by the childish idea that perhaps, because she wouldn't go to the opera, she was to be punished—sent away alone—until she was forgiven.

"You're tired of me," she suggested.

"If that were true and you filled the bill, we could put up with each other," he returned brutally, "but I'm not so."

"Don't you love me?" she half breathed the question timidly.

For a brief instant something caught at Slade's heart and tugged and tugged. He turned with a look of infinite tenderness and said, simply: "Yes, Mary, I do." His tone was genuine and sincere.

Mary laughed a little, happy laugh.

At the sound Slade's mood changed like a flash. It grated on his already overwrought nerves. It seemed to dismiss the controversy, to end the argument, to ring the death-knell of the dream that had come to him.

The carefree way in which she apparently dropped the discussion of going away netted him. Prompted by a sudden impulse, he snatched her workbasket from her lap and flung it the full length of the room. "D—n that bastet!" he exclaimed. "Can't I ever see you without it?"

"Dan!" Mary's gasp of amazement was the only sound in the room. It was the first time he had ever been harsh with her. She shrank back hurt and frightened. "Why, good Lord, Dan, you never did that before."

Then, with quiet dignity, she began to pick up the basket, the hated darning cotton, the needles and scissors, and the little worn thimble. Slade, watching her slight, stooping figure, ought to have been ashamed, but his anger was flaming hot and he didn't as much as offer to help.

Mary's mood changed, too.

"I believe you're doing it to get your own way," she pattered, "but you ain't going to get it. I've got as much right to my life as you've got to yours."

As she came up to him, he stood grim and silent, suddenly determined that if she wouldn't go he would. If she refused his offer of a home in the country, then she could have this great house to herself and he would live at the club.

"There ain't anything you could ask of me I wouldn't do—except—" Mary's troubled face was looking into his.

"Except what I ask," he finished, sarcastically, and hurried from the room, curiously ordered his dressing bag packed and then, hat in hand, his overcoat on his arm, came back into the room.

"Did it ever occur to you, Mary, that you're a mule?" he asked. "You're sweet and good tempered and amiable but you'd have given the mule that came out of Noah's ark points on how to be stubborn."

"How often have I failed you in these years, Dan?"

"You're failing me now. You won't look at things with my eyes."

"We're not one person, we're two, Dan," she reminded him, quietly.

"Well, that's the trouble, we ought to be one. That's just what I'm getting at. We ought to be of one mind."

"Whose? Yours?" and Mary's sweet mouth puckered into a very little smile.

"I'm done," Slade decided, hopelessly.

"Why, what?" Mary began, and then stopped. For the first time she noticed his changed manner and his averted eyes. She started to fumble with her workbasket.

"It's—" Slade continued to be monosyllabic. "But I want to have a talk with you, Mary—we've got to come to some understanding."

"Why, what?" Mary began, and then stopped.

"I can remember the time when you would have thought that was cunning," she reproached him.

The Governor's Lady

her way from a dance to pick up her husband.

"You simply weren't listening to a word I said," Mrs. Merritt complained in her affectionately affectionate way. "I was asking if you know Mr. Slade very well."

"Yes," Katherine replied, lightly, "we know him very well."

"And does he ever mention his wife?" in Mrs. Merritt's most perfectly felicitous manner.

"Never once," admitted Katherine, without even an attempt at an evasion.

"And you have never met her?" Mrs. Merritt was in her glory if she could probe.

"No, I have never met her."

"How extraordinary! My husband—why, Wesley Merritt's name spells hearth and home, domestic purity—while Slade's! They tell me he hasn't seen his wife for weeks, and it's town talk that he's living at his club. And to think he's never mentioned her to you!"

Katherine had quietly rung for a servant, and as Mrs. Merritt finished, remarked casually: "Martin, see that these letters are mailed at once."

Unashamed, Mrs. Merritt was moving eagerly about the artistic room, comfortable in all its appointments, its richness enhanced and mellowed with age, a blend of color that nothing but time can give.

Fannie Merritt was a decided blonde. Her decision had been made more than ten years before. It was a decision that, once made, must be abided by, and the woman had been living up to it ever since. Her gown was the last word of sartorial elegance and style. Daringly decolleté it clung to her long, svelte figure with loving emphasis, and trailed round her exquisitely dressed feet. Her hair did credit to the hairdresser's long and patient efforts, and long, bizarre diamond pendants flashed and sparkled from her ears. If ever a woman had become a slave to her own personal pleasure and dress, that woman was Fannie Merritt. Too self-centered and selfish ever to crave motherhood, she lavished a kind of affection on a watery-eyed little poodle, which repaid her with lap-dog gratitude.

Tonight she was restless and ill at ease. Like Katherine, her mind was full of one thought—Slade, Slade, Slade—but thoughts that took a different direction. She was sick of his name, sick of hearing of his money, sick of the talk of his power and of hearing him named as "the man of the hour." He was winning the very honors she had coveted for her husband, and taking them right out from beneath his very eyes and nose. There didn't seem to be a doubt of Slade becoming governor, the very position for which her husband had been striving for the past six terms. Slade with his millions needed the governorship no more than a pampered child needs a new toy, while to her husband success or failure this time meant either the retrieving of his fortunes or his utter ruin.

The abstraction of the two women was broken by the sudden entrance of Hayes.

"Hewh!" he whistled. "They're having a time of it in there. Good evening, Mrs. Merritt, your husband is certainly making it warm for Mr. Slade."

"Indeed," laughed Mrs. Merritt, gratified for the moment.

"Dear, dear!" she exclaimed as she watched Hayes gazing wistfully at Katherine and looking very handsome and manly in his well-made evening clothes. "It's quite like old times to see you together." Unhappy herself, it gave her a certain pleasure to make other people unhappy. The jealousy she had long felt for the younger and more beautiful woman found expression now in her purring tones, as with amiable cruelty, she reminded them of their earlier intimacy. She took delight in making Bob writhe and Katherine whiten as she recalled their passionate young love when only the senator's stern interference had kept them from wedded.

"Let me see," she recollects, "when I was your confidante, you were he almost collided with Merritt. Katherine had hurried out to see a reporter who wanted the whereabouts and the whys of the dinner party to Slade. "I can't possibly get away, dear," Merritt explained to his wife. "I've been buttonholed by some men from up the state. Shall you wait or go home—first?"

Mrs. Merritt refused to be disturbed in that peremptory fashion. "I'll wait," she returned with acid sweetness. "Then if you are not ready I'll run along."

"Slade's had an ovation tonight," Merritt informed her, nodding toward the smoking-room. "The big out-of-town men are all here. Some of 'em in there yet. He's big, Fannie. He's big. We can't deny that. The brute attacks his point with all the force of a sledge hammer."

"Yes, that's what you lack—punch!" his wife turned on him petulantly.

"You're snowed under," she complained, blithely. "If you'd taken my advice you wouldn't have come to this Slade feed-tonight. What's your paper?" she demanded, "if you can't attack your rival candidate in its columns? Anyone would think you wanted to make him governor—instead of yourself?"

"I can't attack him publicly," Merritt retorted. "He'd put up glue factories facing our property and, with a lake breeze blowing our way—pew! My position is very difficult. Of course, election's a long way ahead, but I'm the only stick in his puddle."

"Yes, you're a big stick!" she taunted. "Why don't you do something?"

"What can I do?" he groaned. "I've been told tonight by no less than four men that they won't support me again. And Strickland's speech introducing Slade was a masterpiece!"

"Yes—Strickland's masterpieces are concocted by his daughter, we all know that. Just as I write your stuff," she finished with hateful emphasis on the possessive.

"My dear, I wish you'd be more careful!" warned Merritt, making sure that the door leading into the smoking-room was closed.

"Your 'Message to the Farmer'—that made you famous! What did I ever get for writing it?" and with self-satisfied deliberateness she arranged herself carefully in a low-seated chair near the fireplace.

"I never denied that you had a man's brain," placatingly, drawlingly, mockingly, "darling."

"Yes—I'm the human mosquito that buzzes behind your ears. God help us if it wasn't for me. Did you ask the senator for the $10,000 I want?" she demanded.

"He can't," Merritt was huddled in the nearest chair. The subject had been causing him appetiteless days and sleepless nights. When a woman of Fannie Merritt's persistency and tenacity wants something a man can't get then that man is very likely to be nagged into desperation.

"You look out, Wesley," she answered, alarm breaking the careful modulation of her voice. "That's the first time he ever refused us."

"He's broke—dead broke. I don't know how he can keep this up. The senator's nearly out. That's why he's sticking to Slade."

"Well, I don't care how you get it—I want it. It's vital. I've got to have ten thousand to go to Europe. Everybody's going—Mrs. Webb, Mrs. O'Donnell—" and her voice trailed off into a pettish whine.

"Yes, I know all about that crowd," Merritt snarled. "Sunny places for shady people."

"Wesley! I need clothes. I've told everybody I'm going," and the peevish woman glared at her husband. Then she added suddenly: "Can't the senator ask Slade?"

"Oh, my God, Fannie!" the hectoring man groaned. "Can I suggest that? A rival candidate! I've mortgaged my property up to the hilt now for clothes—but sooner than—"

"I don't care—I need clothes," his wife interrupted, rising and walking restlessly about the room. "I've got to go to Europe. The devil take your excuses."

"Then, with a sudden change of thought, she cooed. "Wesley!"

Merritt stood with his elbow on the mantel, looking moodily into the fire.

"Wesley," she cooed again. "Why don't you—if you can't get in—why don't you boom Slade? They say he's buying everybody."

"Well, we've been bought." Her husband's tone indicated just how little consideration such a plan would have from him.

"No, but you've been defeated six times," she objected, determined to argue this new possibility that had just occurred to her. "Wes—If the senator has gone back on you—look out. Sell out. I must have clothes."

She stopped as the senator himself entered from the smoking room.

"They're asking for you, Wesley," and Merritt, glad of the interruption, hurried out.

"Ah—good evening, Fannie." Strickland took her hand in his smooth, affable way. "I'm sorry, Fannie, that Wesley doesn't take more to Slade. It's a great mistake. Why don't you tell him so?"

"Oh, my gracious!" her manner changing to suit the occasion. "What influence could I possibly have with my husband? He's a man of iron will. Why, I have to do everything he tells me myself. I wouldn't dare to meddle with his affairs."

"Well, just coax him, Fannie, the way a nice, sweet, womanly woman can," urged the senator, knowing full well that the Merritts had one means for private use and quite another for publication.

"I want to go to Europe and my husband says he can't afford it."

"O! Fannie!" Katherine's voice was not as firm as usual.

"I always said," the woman persisted, "Rob, she'll come home to you in the end."

"I think I'll go back and listen to the discussion," and Bob flung disgustedly out of the room. At the door he left him to pass back and forth the length of the room. "I can't," she sighed. Then hurriedly: "If I only had the courage. Oh, Rob!" and she turned on him with a helpless little gesture.

"What do you mean by courage?" he demanded.

"I mean I'd have to—live here in this little hole in the West," she burst forth, vehemently. "No—no, I can't face it—it always!"

"Well, suppose it did mean to stay there?" Bob stood with folded arms. "It's a home. Everyone vegetates more or less at home. Katherine!" his voice became more tender. "do you really mean that?" And he put his arms around her shoulders and looked long and earnestly into her upraised face.

"I couldn't—Oh, Rob, I couldn't."

BUSINESS IS MARKING THE MAN WHO DRINKS

Why So Many Former "Good Fellows" Have
"Cut It Out" and How They Did It.

"There's a reason," as they say in the advertisements, for the great American railway systems putting the screws on drinking employees. A train in charge of a crew whose brains are alcoholically stewed would be no safer than if it were manned by a crowd of crazy people.

Common sense is getting the chance these days. People are stopping to think. Business says "Quit Drink." There is no sentiment about it. Business, however, knows that Incapacity and Alcohol are bosom friends. They're chums. Drink and Efficiency, however, do not mix.

This age demands efficiency and the man who once drank and thought it all right is now marked.

Business has got his number. He's off the line of march of the candidates for promotion. This is why so many of the wise old boys have stopped drink-

It is easy to get rid of that old craving appetite for liquor. To try and stop when your system is filled with alcoholic poison means torture. You can easily escape this torture, which almost invariably upsets good resolutions and pulls a man back to drink.

The Neal Treatment will neutralize and expel all alcoholic poison and change love for liquor into disgust for everything alcoholic.

Three days' at the old Capt. C. M. Holloway homestead—now the Cincinnati Neal Institute—will be sufficient to bring about this seeming miracle. Over 2,000 cases of alcoholism have been successfully treated at the three Neal Institutes in Ohio.

For full particulars and booklet, write The Neal Institute, 601 Maple Avenue, Cincinnati, Ohio. Telephone Avon 4020. Other Neal Institutes at Columbus and Cleveland.

BRONCHITIS CONQUERED

Royersford, Pa., Man Tells How.

At this season of year with such sudden changes, it is so easy to take cold, and almost before one is aware there is inflammation in the bronchial tubes—a hard cough and unless checked in time chronic pulmonary troubles may result.

Townsend Young of Royersford, Pa., says: "A severe bronchial trouble contracted caused me much difficulty about breathing. My chest felt clogged up and there was considerable soreness. I tried different remedies without help; but I am glad to say that Vinol cured my bronchial trouble which had lasted for three months. My breathing is all right and the soreness entirely gone from my chest."

Vinol contains the curative, healing principles of fresh cod's liver (without oil) and tonic iron. We guarantee it to be delicious in taste and to satisfy you with its medicinal effects.

P. S. If you have any skin trouble try Saxo Salve. We guarantee it.

Temperance Topics.

We are indebted to the National Advocate, official organ of the National Temperance Society, for many of the following items.—Editor.

The Webb-Kenyon law, giving States control over liquor shipments, was upheld by the Kansas Supreme Court.

Prohibition will be extended to the entire naval service, under an order issued by Secretary Daniels at Washington, which will go into effect on July 1, next.

A trainman, who is in charge of 200 passengers and $250,000 worth of rolling stock, or who is directing an express locomotive, needs to be at his best physically, and this is possible only in total abstinence from intoxicants.

Senator Oliver, of Pittsburgh, has declared in favor of a State-wide prohibition plank in the Republican party platform of Pennsylvania.

Frederick Landis, former member of Congress from Indiana, made his first temperance speech in Muncie on March 1st. He had never been a regular passenger on the Barleycorn Special, but an occasional tourist. Now he has left it.

A bill is before the U. S. Senate to prohibit the sale of liquors in the Hawaiian Islands. John C. Woolley and others have appeared before the Senate committee having the bill in charge.

Because the sale of liquor on its trains is unlawful in the State of Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut, the N. Y., N. H. & Hartford railroad system issued orders that no more liquor be sold thereon, beginning from the first of March last.

The sale of liquors on all dining-cars while in Michigan has been forbidden by the railroad management of that State.

The Mississippi Senate made more drastic and then passed the law enforcement bill which had previously passed the House.

Without a cent of tax receipts from saloons, Rockford, Ill., during the year of 1913 expended $343,423.03 on public improvements. Its tax rate is the lowest of any city of its class in the State of Illinois.

The Maine State Board of Prisons and Jail Inspectors has reported that "in 1913 the commitments were 40 per cent. lower than in 1912, and 37 per cent. lower than the average for the last six years." And this on account of the better enforcement of prohibition.

When two ex Congressmen are convicted of crimes, we stand aghast at such evidence of moral turpitude. But the saloon everywhere tends to or actually teaches that; and the saloon in politics is a constant corrupting element, and good people have been keeping it there, regardless of its effects, all along the political line, from Congressman down to constable.

Dr. A. D. Bridgeman, of Decatur, Ill., 80 years old, has enrolled 1,000 men to vote for prohibition.

Railroads entering Chicago recently agreed to stop selling liquor on trains, and that "the movement be spread throughout the country."

Billy Sunday came to New York for 1 day and made 1 speech March 9th and one reporter quoted him as saying, in a private interview (for public print) that "universal prohibition is coming; you can't stop it any more than you can stop Niagara Falls with a toothpick. Prostitution and the saloon go hand in hand." He further said: "Do away with the saloon and you do away with prostitution."

"Well, Uncle Rod, I hear you have an other set of twins at your house."

"Yaas, missus," responded the old man, "we has. Bress dey little hearts!"

"Have you named them?" asked the lady.

"Yaas'm," said Rod. "Done named 'em astah two ob de fust Pres'dents ob dis country."

"Indeed?" said Mrs. Stone, "which two?"

"Ole Christofe Clumbus and Juleus Caesar," replied Uncle Rod. "We'se great on namin' de chillun' fo' de Pres'dents' our house."—National Monthly.

Imaginary Heart Trouble.

Do you have pains in the region of the heart? Does your heart thump? Is its terrible pounding alarms you? What is wrong? Do you believe these symptoms mean heart trouble? Organic diseases of the heart very seldom occasion much pain. Nearly all of these pains are occasioned by some derangement of the stomach. Meritol Tonic Digestive is especially recommended for indigestion and dyspepsia, and for restoring the stomach to its normal functions and no more "heart disease." Price $1.00 Wines' Drug Store, exclusive agents.

Cheer Up.

When things ain't going right with you, and you can't make them gee; when business matters look real blue, and you fear bankruptcy; when cobwebs gather on your stock and customers are rare; when all your assets are in hock, don't cuss and tear your hair. Just listen to this sage advice, and take it if you are wise: give every article a price, and then go advertise. And advertise from morn to night, don't overlook a day, and soon you'll see the world grow bright, and things will come your way. Invest in good publicity, and fortune will greet, and in a little while you'll be way up on easy street.—Luke McLuke.

Birds Come High at Phoenix Hotel.

"Phoenix birds" take rank among rara avis since the cost of prosecuting the Phoenix Hotel Company, of Lexington, for having the birds in its possession, alleged to be exposed for sale, has been counted up. It is estimated in the Department of Game and Fish that the fines assessed in the State and Federal courts, the costs and attorney fees, run the expense well up toward $1,500. Some 70 quail were involved, which makes their price somewhere around $20 each, to say nothing of the original cost and expression.

The cases now have all been disposed of. After repeated warning that it would prosecute any hotels or restaurants unlawfully serving game birds, the Fish and Game Department had a representative to search the Phoenix Hotel and the birds were found. That was in February, 1912. Fines amounting to $600 were assessed in the Fayette county court and on appeal the circuit court sustained the finding and the fines were reduced to $150. The Court of Appeals reversed the judgment. On re trial the cases were dismissed and the Court of Appeals reversed the action of the Fayette circuit court, which had given peremptory instructions for the defendant. By agreement judgment has been confessed and fines amounting to $380 and costs assessed.

In the meantime the Federal Department instituted prosecution in the U. S. Court and a fine of $250 was assessed for receiving from Chicago a shipment of quail not properly marked.

The Maine State Board of Prisons and Jail Inspectors has reported that "in 1913 the commitments were 40 per cent. lower than in 1912, and 37 per cent. lower than the average for the last six years." And this on account of the better enforcement of prohibition.

Rheumatic Complications Stopped And The "Human Sewers" Restored.

The Kidneys, Bowels and Skin are the "human sewers" which carry off the impurities in the blood. When these are clogged Uric Acid sediment lodges in the muscles and joints and Rheumatism follows. RHEUMA, the great remedy for all forms of the terrible disease, checks the deposit of Uric Acid.

"I suffered from Rheumatism for six years. Tried different doctors, with no relief. I have taken three bottles of RHEUMA and am entirely free from the disease." —P. W. Miller, Catawissa, Penn.

Saved Girl's Life

"I want to tell you what wonderful benefit I received from the use of Thedford's Black-Draught," writes Mrs. Sylvania Woods, of Clifton Mills, Ky.

"It certainly has no equal for la grippe, bad colds, liver and stomach troubles. I firmly believe Black-Draught saved my little girl's life. When she had the measles, they went in on her, but one good dose of Thedford's Black-Draught made them break out, and she has had no more trouble. I shall never be without

MC CREAM GUARDS:

Awaiting Orders.

The local company of the First Regiment, National Guards, Company M, Capt. Broadus, is awaiting orders from the Adjutant General to mobilize for the front. They have received orders to be in readiness for the summons, but it is not positively certain that they will be called to Mexico, but the chances are that they are likely to be.

LATER—Capt. Broadus, of the local company, has just received notices from headquarters to recruit his company to the maximum strength and be in readiness to move on short notice. His company is one of the best equipped in the State, their guns and side arms being of the very latest improved models. Adjutant General J. Tandy Ellis, of Frankfort, says the Richmond company is one of the best drilled organizations in the Guards, therefore stands an opportunity of being among the first called into service. Official inspection of the home company was made by United States officers at the Armory last night at 8 o'clock. Capt. Broadus has left nothing undone to make his company stand at the head of the State Guards in its inspection.

In the event war is declared 100 good men will be needed to raise the Richmond company to full war strength. Those ambitious for immediate service should communicate at once with Capt. Broadus.

The Richmond Band, to be known as First Regiment Band, was inspected and sworn in last night.

BANG GOES ALL RECORDS

Men's Summer Suits at Reduced Prices

at the beginning of summer, not at the end.

In order to attain the highest record in our business career we are going to offer our customers an inducement to buy early and to buy now; therefore, we have put on this reduction on all Men's Spring Summer Suits. We have always marked our goods goods at a low profit and will continue to do so, but we are anxious to break all records for a cash business. This is your time to save money. Now come early.
